EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the Regulations)

1. These Regulations come into operation on 1st March 2007 and make a number of amendments to the Family Income Supplement (General) Regulations 1998 (“Family Income Supplement Regulations”) mainly consequential on changes to the qualifying conditions for child benefit made by the Child Benefit Act 2005 (of the United Kingdom Parliament) and the Child Benefit (General) Regulations 2006 made under that Act.
2. Following those changes, a person may become entitled to child benefit if the person in respect of whom benefit is claimed is either –
 - a person aged less than 16 (called “a child” in the legislation); or
 - a person aged 16 or over but under the age of 20 who is either –
 - undertaking a course of full-time education (but not above “A” level standard); or
 - enrolled to undertake a further course of the same type,(called “a qualifying young person” in the legislation).
3. Regulations 1 and 2 provide for the Regulations’ citation, commencement and interpretation and introduce the amendments they make.
4. Provision already exists for a person claiming family income supplement to have an allowance included in their applicable amount for any child or young person in their family for whom they are entitled to child benefit. Regulations 3 to 5, 7 and 8 amend the Family Income Supplement Regulations so as to maintain eligibility for such allowances by reflecting the new qualifying conditions for child benefit.
5. Regulation 6 provides that any additional winter bonus (as well as any winter bonus) payable to a person receiving family income supplement will not affect their entitlement to family income supplement.
6. Regulation 9 makes necessary transitional provision as to the coming into force of certain of the Regulations.
